Professor Andrew MacIntyre and staff from across the University welcomed the delegation which included alumna Professor Supriya Pattanayak, Deputy Vice-Chancellor of Centurion University, Mr Rakesh Malhotra, Acting Consul General and Professor Margaret Kumar, Adjunct Professor at Centurion.

The ceremony marked a special moment for the relationship between RMIT and Centurion, which has grown organically from early connections.

RMIT's Associate Professor Yaso Nadarajah has been working with Centurion for over 10 years and has been instrumental in establishing student projects and placements since 2006, including a study tour in 2016.

The Memorandum of Understanding has formalised the relationship between Centurion and RMIT's School of Global, Urban and Social Studies, providing a basis for further expansion and collaboration.
