Description:

The workshop was to explore and understand the procedure to create a successful Udemey course. It was a very creative session involving many divisions of instructions and lectures by Dr. Pani who guided the participants through the subject matter in an organized and thoughtful way. The participants practised by creating a sample course under the guidance of facilitator. The course was initiated with a title, basic requirements, proposed audience and various other details of the course, followed by an assignment section with single or multiple lectures. Each section should be mapped to one learning objective and each lecture should cover a single concept or activity. It includes uploading of articles, hyperlinks, documents, quizzes and videos and a final evaluation section to assess the progress of the audience.

Dr. Prajna conceptualized the theory of creating an outline for an online course that will lay out with planned sections and lectures, including the activities and assessments one would add to help learners by apply their learning. While creating the outline, it is necessary to think about the format to use for each lecture.
