Event Details:

On May 22, 2025, the School of Nursing, Centurion University of Technology and Management (CUTM), Paralakhemundi, observed World Preeclampsia Day with an insightful virtual awareness program conducted via Google Meet. The event focused on raising awareness about preeclampsia, its implications on maternal and fetal health, and the importance of early detection and prevention.

The program commenced with a warm welcome speech delivered by student coordinator Milan Kumar Muduli, a 3rd semester B.Sc. Nursing student. He set the tone for the event by emphasizing the importance of World Preeclampsia Day in the field of maternal health care.

The keynote seminar was delivered by the esteemed Dr. Sandhyarani Panigrahi, Director and Obstetrics & Gynaecology Specialist, who provided an in-depth overview of preeclampsia, including its pathophysiology, risk factors, clinical manifestations, and current approaches to diagnosis and management. Her session offered valuable insights that enhanced the knowledge of both students and faculty alike.
